

Volchemy provides warm, practical support, career profiling and workshops for busy schools that occasionally need extra capacity and a reliable resource to draw on.

Volchemy Careers partners with schools across Melbourne to support students through practical careers planning: understanding their Morrisby profile and its more advanced functions in detail, exploring options, and turning insight into clearer next steps.

A support day can be tailored to your school's unique needs and may include 1:1 or group Morrisby unpacking sessions, group workshops, parent workshops or presentations, practical help administering careers profiling, or general career support at school, online or offsite excursions.

About Mark Cowell

Mark has had unique career spanning private, not-for-profit and government sectors, and has been working as a career consultant since 2019.

Initially working with adults managing career transitions across government, Mark started Volchemy to offer a private career service and has been supplier delivering the My Career Insights program for the Department of Education and the Australian Centre for Career Education since 2023.

Long before training as a career practitioner, Mark started his career as a youth and community worker, and arts facilitator in the mid 1990's, gaining a Bachelor of Business later on while working in the advertising and media industries.

While working in government, where short term contracts are the norm, Mark took a natural interest in supporting colleagues navigating insecure work and became informally known as "careers guy".

As a workplace trainer, he'd often step outside his formal role and run workshops on resume writing and interview preparation to help nervous job applicants, and was inspired to formalise these skills, completing post graduate study in education, counselling and careers.
